Prophecy

By William D. Barber

He argues morning, noon and night,
And wins, if he be wrong or right;
So J. D. will be, of course,
A lawyer, criminal and divorce.

A plumber, working overtime,
With charges huge and nerve sublime.
Leon's future plain I see;
A very wealthy man He'll be.

Ere many years Bill will be
A solemn Doctor of Philosophy.
And in a manner haughty shall expound,
His wisdom and his theories profound.

Her fertile brain and ready wit
Proclaim at once the job she'd fit.
Madge will write the perfect story,
Thus covering herself with glory.

Young Lee has great ambition
He'll be a wily politician.
To Congress by admirers sent,
And next, perhaps, be President.

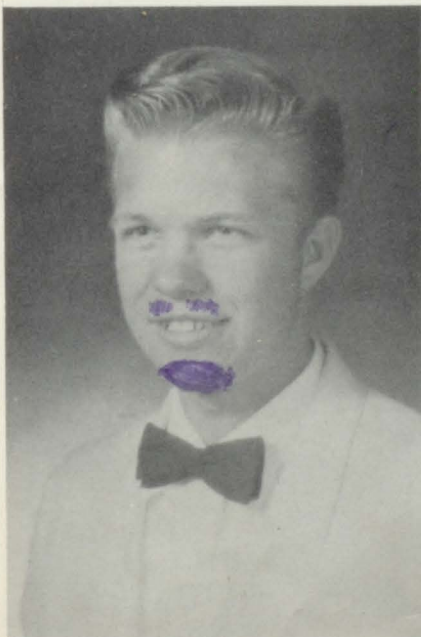

Darrell likes to speculate
And takes his fun in tempting fate.
So he'll become the reckless joker!
A very lucky Wall Street broker.

Marcella, a girl of charm and grace,
Whose virtues are reflected in her face.
Will live in peace and plenty all her life,
A housekeeper deluxe and happy wife.

CLASS MOTTO: "We've crossed the bay;
the ocean lies before us."

Humor

"Would The World Collapse If--"

Madge came to school on the bus every morning?

Mr. Smith brought a pencil to History Class?

Vernon Harris would come to school three days out of five?

Harold would leave Kershner's porch light alone when he walks Janet to the door?

Joann would quit giggling?

The Senior Class would agree on one thing?

Charlie would quit scratching his head?

Thaine would make All-American in basketball?

Harold wouldn't foul out every game?

Corky would develop a new laugh?

Connie was seen without Janet or Pat?

J. D. would get home from Lamar before 4:00 A. M.?

Shorty would grow taller?

J. D. would ever get a car?

Shum would turn out the lights on a school trip?

If the high school girls would win a basketball game?

Alfreda took Jo Stafford's place?

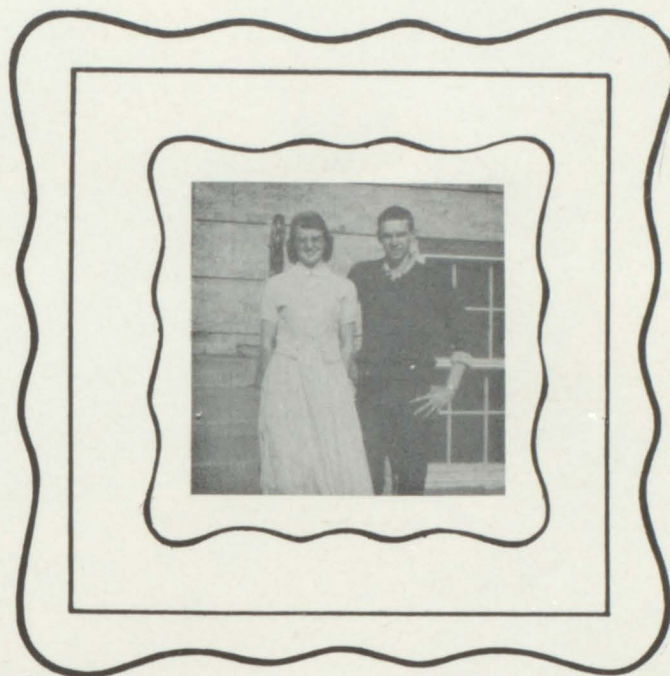

Gilbert and Leo would quit making love to each other?

Bill and Marcella would go together?

Leon would win a Mr. America award?

Wilma would replace Liberace?
